

Did You Know

By Pat J. Kirwin

THAT 41 years ago today, a disastrous fire of unknown origin destroyed the stables at the Sunny Side Stock farm owned by Joseph S. Smith, just outside of the city, resulting in a loss of nearly $20,000 and the deaths of 10 fine horses.

The Democrat and Watchman of the time tells the story of the fire as follows:

"About 6:30 p. m. the large barn was discovered to be on fire, the flames proceeding from the haymow. Mr. Smith had only left the barn 10 minutes before and at that time there were no indications of fire nor had anyone been seen smoking about the building.

"The hay burned with such rapidity that it was with greatest efforts and dangerous exposure that four of the 14 horses in the barn were rescued. The horses lost in the flames were valued at $8,000 and included a two-year-old colt, three geldings and six mares. Those saved were three valuable stallions and an old driving mare, valued at $6,000.

"The city fire department responded to the alarm but the fire was too far away from the hydrants to be reached, however, a fire engine was taken out and emptied the large cistern at Mr. Smith's residence, but without avail.

"The barn and 50 tons of hay in the loss were valued at $9,000. The origin of the fire is a mystery. The theory of spontaneous combustion, advanced by some, was discredited by Mr. ...

COUNTY RELIEF FUND BOOSTED; MORE TO WORK

Brought Writes Auditor That April Fund Will Be $3,700

WILL HELP JOBS

'Case' Worker to Recommend Men for Work

Local officials were notified, Saturday, that Pickaway-co's April quota from the "work division" of the Federal Emergency Relief administration has been increased from $2,500, the figure first announced, to $3,700.

The notice was sent to Auditor Cliff M. White by E. O. Braught, executive director of the "work division" of the state emergency relief administration.

The increase was made possible by the addition of $1,000,000 to the Ohio grant for April from the federal government, which was announced Friday. The 32,000 workers for April previously allotted to Ohio under the FERA will now total about 50,000, it is believed. This number is about half of those employed when the CWA was stopped.

GIVE MORE WORK

The $2,200 increase for Pickaway-co will provide work for half again as many men as was figured under the program.

Relief officials were highly pleased with the news because with the additional allotment they will be able to put many more needy men on the payroll. Each is allowed 24 hours a week at 35 cents an hour. With more men at work local projects are expected to be completed in much faster time. The North end storm water sewer, Armory, Memorial Hall, Walnut-st. school addition, and Berger hospital landscaping projects are all suspended now awaiting assignment of workers.

NEED 'CASE' WORKER

Nothing has been received at the auditor's office concerning action on appointment of a 'case' worker to investigate the families on relief to determine which are the most needy. The commissioner early in the week recommended employment of Mrs. Carl V. Ritz as 'case' worker since that office is necessary under the FERA.

A. J. Dunkel, relief commissioner, said Saturday that as soon as a 'case' worker goes into action and certifies names of men who should have work the project will be resumed.

Teddy's Son Meets G.O.P. Leaders to Plan Attack To Gain Congress Seats

WASHINGTON, April 7.—In a series of conferences with Republican leaders here today, Theodore Roosevelt, Jr. informed them he is ready to "take his shirt off" in a battle to capture control of Congress next fall.

The son of the immortal 'Teddy' Roosevelt canvassed the entire political situation with Republican senators and leaders in the house.

Having joined in a movement to revivify the National Republican club and promote the interests of the Republican party among young men, Roosevelt is said to have taken violent exception to the political policy of his cousin in the White House.

SEN'S SUCCESS

"I think the Republicans will win a great many seats in Congress next fall," he said.

While declining to reduce his prediction to figures he indicated he expected the Republicans to have a powerful bloc in the house next year.

Grimacing broadly, Roosevelt declared he had not heard rumors he was being boomed to oust Everett Sanders as chairman of the Republican national committee.

"That is news to me," he said.

Among those Roosevelt saw is Rep. James Wadsworth, (R) of New York, who has been suggested as a Republican presidential candidate in 1936. Wadsworth has laid before Republicans a plan of attack on the entire program of the Roosevelt administration.

Many Injured as Police, Mob Riot

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., April 7.—Eighteen persons, thirteen of them policemen, nursed battered heads and other injuries today as the aftermath of bloody riots by 5,000 unemployed at the city hall and courthouse building here.

Officers were still on guard with machine and riot guns today while Police Chief Michael Johannes investigated reports that a score of armed men were planning to dynamite the City hall. Johannes said he had not learned whether there was any substantial basis for the reports.

Of those injured in the hand-to-hand fighting that broke out twice yesterday were treated at hospitals. Many of the 30 alleged rioters hauled away to the City jail were suffering from bruises, bumps and lacerations inflicted by police night sticks.

GUNS AT HAND

Although machine guns were at hand and ready for use the police guards fought the stones, paving bricks, clubs and fists of the demonstrators with tear gas bombs and billys. Blood reddened the pavement and sidewalks adjacent to the courthouse.

The rioting broke out while a delegation from the demonstrators' ranks was outlining its grievances before the city council. Bricks shattered first floor windows in the building as the mob screamed its defiance of police efforts to restore order.

Word that the delegation appearing before the council had been taken in custody by police and jailed whipped the crowd into a second fury, the battle lasting for nearly an hour.

POLITICS OF WEEK QUIET

Bohnert's Statement Only Matter of Interest; What of Mrs. Morris?

The political front has been rather quiet in Pickaway-co during the past 10 days with Nathan Bohnert's statement that he "might" be a candidate for the Senate from the Franklin-Pickaway district the only item of interest.

Mr. Bohnert is serving his second term in the Ohio House of Representatives from Pickaway-co. He has announced himself for a third term and will be opposed by Clark K. Hunsicker. If Bohnert runs for the Senate he will face another Pickaway countian, William I. Spangler, of Tarlton, who is circulating his petition for the state Senate.

The recorder's office is providing a 'situation.' At least two persons have announced themselves for the Republican nomination but none have come out on the Democratic side. Mrs. Mary G. Morris, incumbent, holds this situation in the palm of her hand. A number of aspirants have approached Mrs. Morris asking her intentions and saying they intend to run if she does not.

CONTROLS SITUATION

Should Mrs. Morris announce herself for another term some now studying the possibilities of a campaign would not come out; should she remain out of the race a number of candidates would surely seek the job.

It is possible there will be no primary for the recorder, however, with the term extender to be decided within a few days by the supreme court. If the vote of the legislature is upheld Mrs. Morris will have two years added to her present term.

So far, Sheriff Charles Radcliff has no opposition for the nomination and neither does A. L. Wilder for his first full term. Cliff M. White for auditor is unopposed.

C. Edward Wright against him in the general election and Earl Hoffman for treasurer finds Robert G. Colville, Frank Anderson, and Ed McClarren also seeking the nomination. Judge J. W. Adkins does not yet have opposition.

Prosecutor Ray W. Davis has not announced himself for second term although he is certain to run. Neither has any opposition announced itself.

MAYOR ACQUITTED

ZANESVILLE, April 7.—Mayor William P. Wetherald today stood acquitted after 25 minutes deliberation by a jury of seven men and five women of charges of malfeasance in office.

The charges against the mayor were brought by a group of five citizens who accused the executive of replacing without authorization civil service employees of the previous administration with party adherents.

During the trial of the mayor, City Solicitor B. E. Leasure testified in behalf of the mayor and assumed the responsibility for making the appointments tentatively.

FREAK STORM HITS PART OF EAST OHIO

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, April 7.—Eastern Ohio today surveyed the damages left in the wake of a terrific spring storm of almost cyclonic proportions which struck the section yesterday.

The storm rode into the area behind a powerful wind that caused thousands of dollars damages and sent citizens scurrying to cover.

In the Belmont-co courthouse, County Auditor E. E. Taylor and his assistants were forced to seek shelter under a steel counter after the wind had smashed through the glass windows, virtually raining debris.

Taylor said that some valuable records were damaged during the storm.

GUARD OFFICIAL INJURED IN CRASH

CHICAGO, April 7.—Major Merrill D. Mann Jr., commander of National guard aviation here, was recovering today from injuries suffered when the airplane he was flying crashed near suburban Hinsdale in a fog.

The ship was not carrying mail, army and national guard officials explained.

Major Mann, who is also a captain in the regular United States army, suffered a sprained ankle and shock when his airplane was wrecked in landing on a farm.

OVER 300 SPORTSMEN ATTEND ANNUAL FETE, HEAR SEYFERT

Red Snapper Served at Elks Club; Many Women Enjoy Program

ATWOOD IN CHAIR

Value of Conservation Outlined in Address

More than 300 sportsmen and sportswomen of Pickaway-co enjoyed the annual banquet and fish fry at the Elks club, Friday evening, with Florida red snapper and all the trimmings served to a king's taste.

With a large crowd on hand at 6 o'clock serving started 30 minutes earlier than scheduled with the result that the program started earlier than usual. The fish was prepared and served by members of the house committee of the Elks club.

After all had partaken of their fill of the 450 pounds of fish the meeting was adjourned to the lodge room where H. E. Betz, president of the Pickaway-co Farmer's and Sportsman's Protective association, opened the program with a few remarks of welcome. He then presented J. Frank Atwood, of Columbus, former state senator, as toastmaster. Mr. Atwood, who served in the legislature with C. C. Chapple, has acted as toastmaster at several sportsman's meetings and has always been a real feature. He was in rare form Friday evening and had a crowd in an uproar a great part of the time with his jokes and 'tail' stories concerning a number of the members of the organization.

SEYFERT SPEAKER

After a musical program, Mr. Atwood introduced Max C. Seyfert, Jr., local attorney, as the speaker of the evening. Mr. Seyfert, in his usual winning way, recited the activities of the local organization after being furnished information by L. T. Shaner, of ...

MISS STEELE IS SERIOUS

Fracture of Skull Determined; Miss Kirchofer Remains Bedfast.

The condition of Miss Helen Steele, St. Scioto-st., day nurse at Berger hospital, remained serious Saturday.

It has been determined that Miss Steele is suffering from a fractured skull, received Thursday evening when the automobile in which she and Miss Ethel Kirchofer, Berger hospital superintendent, were returning from Columbus skidded on wet pavement into the path of a north-bound automobile.

Miss Kirchofer, suffering from a broken nose and from shock, remains bedfast.

Her physician reported, that Miss Steele had a fair night Friday and while conscious is rational, her condition is as good as can be expected, he said.

Both injured are patient in the hospital in which they are employed.

C. OF C. HITS RECEIPTS TAX

Says Action Would Force Many Industries to Remove From State.

COLUMBUS, April 7.—Claiming it would increase special taxes on Ohio corporations by 201 per cent and tend to discourage if not actually drive industries from the state, the Ohio chamber of commerce today unleashed an attack on the senate gross receipts tax bill.

This measure, written by Sen. D. J. Gunsett, (D) Van Wert, has no official sponsor in the senate since Sen. W. P. Haynes (D) West Lafayette, under whose name it was introduced by the senate tax committee, insisted that his name be stricken off.

It is ardently advocated by Senator Gunsett and is being held in reserve as a substitute for the administration's proposal based on a 3 per cent sales tax in the event the sales tax is defeated as private polls indicate.

The Ohio chamber of commerce, championing the sales tax, sent a bulletin to all members and other business leaders throughout the state, predicted that the rates in the bill as they now stand would be inadequate to meet the state's need for new revenue, but that once enacted into law, these rates would later be hiked to whatever point necessary to meet the requirements.

Present rates in the gross receipts tax bill are 1-4 of one per cent on all sales intended for resale and 1-2 of one per cent on other gross receipts, including personal incomes.

Judge Is Angered Calls Jurors In Dillinger Probe

Contempt Hearings Set For Monday After Court Is Rebuked In Report.

CROWN POINT, Ind., April 7.—The unusual spectacle of a grand jury, whose duties were to carry out the orders of a judge, facing the same judge in contempt of court proceedings was to be presented in Judge William J. Murray's criminal court here Monday at 9 a. m.

When it essayed to find out how John Dillinger, notorious bank robber made his "toy gun" escape from the Jackson jail on March 3, the grand jury was instructed by Judge Murray to investigate every phase of the desperado's escape. But today the same six men, their work done, must appear to show cause why they should not be held in contempt of court.

In the report of proceedings, the jury laid a portion of the blame for Dillinger's break at Judge Murray's door.

Another unusual sequence of the case may be that Dillinger's escape may have indirectly to playing no part in the actual escape. Indiana law provides a penalty for direct contempt of not more than six months in jail, or a fine of not more than $500, or both. Appeal can be made only to the state supreme court.

600 Lepers Parade Street of Village

ALLAHABAD, India, April 7.—This city was thrown into consternation today as 600 lepers, having forced the doors of a nearby leper colony, paraded through the streets demanding restoration of a cut of one-third of their food allowance and pocket money.

Authorities apparently were unable to deal with the group, which camped beside the city's power house refusing to budge unless their demands were satisfied.

Youths Out of School, Work Potential Communists, Speaker Says

MEETING IS ENDED

Depression Hurts Children Most, is Claim

COLUMBUS, April 7.—If communism ever comes to the United States it will be nurtured by "the lost generation" of today — youths out of school and out of work.

This warning was given here today by Dr. Henry H. Goddard of Ohio State university, speaking before the Ohio Education conference which continued the session of the national Citizens' Committee on the Crisis in Education last night.

At the concluding session of the conference, Dr. Goddard pointed out the shoulders of the public in a resolution which called upon "an aroused public opinion to ensure the success of the country educational stages as adequate as those available in past years to the day adults."

"GREATEST SUFFERERS"

Children, Dr. Goddard said today, have been the greatest sufferers from the depression.

"If communism does come this country," he said, "it will come not because of lack of material that children have acquired had not the war intervened with and because children have had insufficient have been turned out of school and out of work in the characteristic manner of the 'lost generation'."

Prof. George D. Teachers' College, Columbus, verily, urged federal education today, with the organization and supervision of the states.

Freak Tidal Wave Kills Norwegians

Believe Huge Rock Falling Into Sea Cause of Disaster; 39 Known Dead.

The disaster occurred on the side of Korsnes fjord, on the Norwegian east coast. The great waves inundated both banks of the fjord.

Six houses were undermined and washed inland in a heap of ruins at Tugjord. The town of Fjordaa, on the opposite bank, suffered a similar fate.

Damage in crops and property was extremely high.

COPENHAGEN, April 7.—A freak "tidal wave," caused by the crashing of an enormous rock into the sea, took a toll of at least 39 lives in Norwegian fishing towns today in one of the strangest disasters in Norway's history.

The huge rock fell into the water with a thundering roar near Aabard, Norway, at 3:30 o'clock this morning, causing three successive "tidal waves" which swept inland for a distance of 800 yards.

Wrecking fishing craft, waterfront structures, and many homes while inhabitants were asleep, the giant waves inundated the small fishing towns of Tafford and Fjordaa.

There were 22 known dead in Tafford and 17 in Fjordaa. It was feared there might have been similar casualties in other towns of the vicinity which were believed to have been struck also by the unusual disturbance.

It was not known what caused the great rock to fall into the sea, but its plunge was believed due to some sort of an earth rumbling.

Governor Backs Bills To Give Two Millions to Muskingum Valley.

COLUMBUS, April 7.—Governor George White today affixed his signature to the two Bittering bills concerned with the $34,000,000 Muskingum watershed conservancy district project.

The bills, which would have been effective at midnight tonight whether or not the governor attached his signature to them, provide for an appropriation of $2,000,000 as the state's share toward the gigantic project and also give the state highway director the authority to build and relocate roads in the 16 Ohio counties comprising the Muskingum watershed.

Following the signing of the billment, which said:

Story of Activities of Pickaway-Co. Men Against Morgan's Raiders Told

EDITOR'S NOTE—Example set by Major Crouse in training Morgan's raiders, is lauded by C. C. Ben in his narrative of the First Pickaway. Another of the series will follow on Monday.

Then commenced a ten mile march on the double quick that should have done infinite credit to veteran soldiers, the whole march having been made in a little less than two hours.

The first dispatch said that Morgan was just above the town, and would arrive in half an hour, and when we got into the place, the ladies were in great consternation, weeping and wailing. The gay appearance and confident manner of the First Regiment, however, dispelled in a great degree their extreme fright for each of the boys as they helped themselves to water furnished by the ladies, told them not to cry; that "all they hoped for was to get a sight of Morgan," that they would "whip him sure, etc.," and one lady whom the author tried to cheer by saying, "Don't cry, madam, Morgan will never reach your town, for we intend to 'eat' ...

From all over the country come reports of a larger attendance at the Easter services than we had in years. That is a good indication. The interest in religion is deeper and more widespread than we realize. It answers a deep hunger of the heart. Easter gives us an assurance of immortality that we crave. Every man has asked the question, "If man die, shall he live again?" Our hearts give us the answer. "Christ Risen" gives us the answer. "Because I live, ye shall live also." Science says it can give us no proof, yet it teaches the conservation of energy. Nothing is ever lost. Shall man be wasted with all his energies. His development? Shall his yearning find no answer? It is impossible to conceive it. Follow up Easter. Go to church tomorrow. Take a friend.

The Morehouse Publishing Co. is a compilation of radio addresses, the first series presenting the central affirmations of the Christian faith and are contributed by representative leaders of thought in various Christian churches. The second series presents Christianity as a way of life based on the Christian faith—an excellent textbook for young people's discussion and forum groups.

THE CHILD AND THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 18:1-14;

19:13-15.

GOLDEN TEXT—Suffer little children, and forbid them not to come unto me; for of such is the kingdom of heaven. Matt. 19:14.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Blesses the Children.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus and His Smallest Friends.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Entering and Growing in the Kingdom.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Sin of Neglecting and Misguiding Children.

1. The Greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven (vv. 1-4).

1. The disciple's question (v. 1). The prominence given to Peter in connection with the announcement of Christ's purpose to build the church and the payment of tribute with the money in the fish's mouth, provoked jealousy on the part of the other disciples. Seeing that the kingdom was to come to realization despite the tragedy of the cross, the disciples thought it best to have settled their place of rank in the kingdom. Instead of entering into sympathy with Jesus in the dark hour of his passion, they were supremely concerned with the dignities to be conferred upon themselves.

2. Jesus' answer (vv. 2-4). He taught them concretely by placing a little child in their midst. Two vital truths stand out in his reply:

a. Condition of entrance into the kingdom (v. 3). He showed them that the great question which should concern them was as to whether they were really in the kingdom. Their behavior revealed the fact that they needed conversion before they could enter into the kingdom. Before they could even see, much less enter into the kingdom, they must be born from above (John 3:3, 5).

b. Those possessing childlike humility are the greatest (v. 4). It is highly important that we understand childhood. The child is dependent, lowly, and docile. Doctor Morgan sets forth the following characteristics of childhood:

(1) Imperfection. The child is not only the emblem of imperfection but is subconsciously aware of it. Because of this it awaits instruction and correction in order for development.

(2) Simplicity. All the powers of the child's being express themselves freely, readily, and naturally.

(3) Submissiveness. While the child has inherited sin yet it yields to the touch of the skillful hand. The touch of the hand of the teacher and the parent leaves its impress upon the child to the end of its life.

II. Jesus' Identification With His Believing Ones (v. 5).

1. Receiving the believer in Christ's name is receiving Christ (v. 5). Through faith in Christ we become God's children, and so completely are our lives interwoven with his that he regards treatment of us as treatment of himself.

2. The awful peril of causing a believer to stumble (vv. 6-9). To cause to stumble means to give occasion for a moral fall. This particularly refers to the carnality and selfishness which were expressing themselves in the disciples' contention for pre-eminence. Their behavior was not only an injury but a stumbling block to others. Every Christian should solemnly inquire as to whether his life would help or hinder his fellow believers. Sinning against Christ's own will meet a sure and awful fate.

III. The Heavenly Father's Special Care for Believers (vv. 10-14).

1. They are under angelic guardianship (v. 10). So precious is the believer in God's sight that angelic messengers are provided (Heb. 1:10).

2. The Son of man came especially to save the lost (vv. 11-14). The heavenly Father does not will that anyone should perish. All are the objects of the Father's seeking love.

IV. Jesus Receiving Little Children (Matt. 19:13-15).

The setting of this text should be most carefully noted. Jesus had been speaking of the sanctity of marriage which is the bulwark of the home. Into the sacred enclosure of the home comes childhood to complete and ennoble it.

1. Children brought to Jesus (v. 13). Most likely they were brought by their parents. Parents naturally desire the blessing of the Lord for their children. Many parents who are careless as to themselves, desire to bring their children into touch with Jesus Christ.

2. Rebuked by the disciples (v. 13). They regarded children as too insignificant to engage the Lord's attention.

3. The disciples rebuked by Christ (v. 14). These words uttered by the Lord have placed a peculiar dignity upon children.

4. Christ laid his hands upon the children (v. 15). This action no doubt indicated his pronouncement of blessing upon them and his tenderness for them.

How make the most of the Sunday school workers' conference?

Avoid spending too much time on administrative details that can be cared for by some authorized officers.

Avoid too long consideration of any subject not of general interest. If subjects not of equal interest to all are discussed they should be concise and vital.

Such challenging subjects as "Securing more whole-hearted cooperation from parents" should be considered. Subjects that will cause those present to seek divine help in a natural devotional period are of value.

Each meeting should have an educational feature. This may be done by a good book review, a special address or a well-directed discussion on some vital subject.

All conferences should not only be well planned but planned ahead some time.

Much ought to be made of fellowship. Members of the workers' conference ought to know and enjoy each other better. By effecting close ties, better team work will be done.

him up" replied in tones of such piteous accent, "O do!" That left an impression on his mind so vivid that its echo is still heard in the cells of memory.

The troops were here divided into two battalions, one taking the river road under the immediate eye of Col. Lynch; the other, composed of companies C, E, and G, took the upper or ridge road, and were commanded by Major Crouse. The Major, in this, as on the former occasion at Berlin Heights, showed his fitness to command, by exhibiting the most sterling qualities. Cool as a cucumber, taking matters with the utmost sang-froid, now smiling at the little mistakes in discipline, and then, at times, a little irreverent at larger ones, placing himself in the foremost post of danger, he set an example that was bravely followed by his little command.

Long Shot for Kentucky Derby

Quoted at odds of 40 to 1 in the future books for the Kentucky Derby, "Black Buddy", popular member of the Greentree Stables' group of entrants, is regarded as a good investment. The big race will be run at Churchill Downs, Louisville, on May 5.

Training Camp Notes

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 7.—It was a worried Bill Terry who arrived here—his home town—at the head of the Giants today. His alleged world's champions have dropped five out of seven exhibition games played thus far with the Cleveland Indians of the American league and if they lose three more they will be definitely shorn of their laurels as far as the citrus circuit is concerned. The score of yesterday's game at Nashville was Cleveland, 6, New York 5.

ORLANDO, Fla., April 7.—The Brooklyn Dodgers break camp here today after meeting the St. Louis Browns in another exhibition game. The Dodgers fortunes are looking up considerably and yesterday found them winning their fourth consecutive exhibition. They beat the Browns, 6-2, with Tony Cuccinello's home run being the big feature of the conquest.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 7.—The New York Yankees were a cocky lot as they arrived here today for an exhibition tilt with the local Southern association team. During the past week the Yankee attack has been functioning on all cylinders and there is every reason to believe the New Yorkers will enter the American league pennant race in tip-top shape. They had an easy time beating the Birmingham Barons, 12 to 1, yesterday.

Elected Mayor

Miss Mary Spelman, who has been a school teacher in Beaver Dam, Wis., schools for forty-nine years, has been elected mayor of that city, defeating her opponent by a vote of 3,432 votes to 1,479. Her election, she declared, was really a "plot" of her former pupils, conceived behind her back. They apparently had a majority "in the bag" before they prevailed upon her to run for the office. "Most every one in the town is some time or other has been her pupil."

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

SALE of the Portsmouth Spartans to a Detroit syndicate for $10,000 has been approved by the stockholders of the club, so the deal is finished, and so is professional football as far as the Ohio river city is concerned. Local pro grid followers, many of whom enjoy that game better than college ball, will now have to go to Cincinnati if they want to see the graduate contests.

Portsmouth fans are sorry to see their team and franchise sold, but the financial burden was too heavy for a city the size of Portsmouth although it had the entire tristate district to draw from.

Loud in his praise of Tommy Loughran, whom he named as "the most wonderful boxer I ever met," Primo Canera, world's champion heavyweight, left this morning for the Maine woods to train for his bout with Max Baer. Canera is not taking the contest lightly realizing Baer's ability, if the Jewish heavyweight from California can be induced to forsake the footlight and women long enough to get into condition.

Watershed conservancy district improvement project, I sent a special message to the general assembly.

"It was pointed out that with the appropriation of $2,000,000 from the state of Ohio, the federal government would grant $2,090,000 for the completion of the project.

"This bill, house bill No. 61, has been adopted. Because of the fact that the general assembly has been slow in passing revenue measures, I made the statement some days ago that I would not sign any measures requiring revenue until the revenue had been provided.

"Inasmuch as the engineers declare that the state expenditure for 1934 on this project will not amount to $2,000,000, but to between $400,000 and $500,000 and inasmuch as the measure provides employment for so many thousands of people, I am not vetoing the bill I am hoping, however, that the general assembly will provide the necessary funds to carry its provisions into execution."

THREAT TO U.S.

legislation the nation has had is destructive. He added his voice to the equalization plan for the support of education.

"We live in an interdependent society," Prof. Strayer declared. "Our population is mobile. It is apparent that the well-being of every section of the country is dependent upon the provision for education made in each of the several states.

"Ignorance," he declared, "cannot be segregated in the United States."

AGAINST FEDERAL

While Prof. Strayer urged federal support for education, Paul C. Stetson, retiring president of the department of superintendence of the National Education Association, took an opposite stand. He vigorously decried attempts to make the national treasury a source of support for the public school, asserting that "federal support in any large measure means federal control."

Stetson asserted that it will take 15 years "to repair the damage to our school systems."

The serious plight into which the nation's schools have been forced because of the economic depression of the past four years was outlined in the resolution adopted at the citizens' conference by more than 100 leaders in various fields of activity in the United States.

The resolution called attention to these facts:

That 3,500,000 children of school age were on April 1 deprived of all schooling.

That 2,000 rural schools failed to open in the fall of 1933.

That even though the schools of the nation are responsible for 1,300,000 more pupils than in 1929-30, they are this year receiving approximately $563,000,000 less for the education of their charges.

That there are at the present time approximately 3,000,000 young people between the ages of 18 and 20 who are out of work and out of school.

That it costs approximately a billion and a half dollars each year for the people of the United States to incarcerate its 500,000 criminals, while it costs but two million more to educate its 26,000,000 school children.

Among those who deplored the educational emergency at the citizens' conference was Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the president, who took the public to task for a selfish attitude at a time when the need "is the ability to cooperate with each other to work for the good of the whole nation."

The number of visitors from the state conservation department was greatly reduced because of the annual meeting of the Central Ohio Anglers' association meeting in Columbus Friday evening. William H. Among the society buds who are climbing the ladder of film are Elizabeth Young, of New York; Virginia Pine, of Chicago; Merry Fahney, also of Chicago; Janet Snowden, New York and Newport, who tired of being a princess after five days as the wife of Prince Caravita; Winnie Flint, society wife of Gil Berry, All-American grid star, and Rosamond Pinckney, niece of the Governor of Pennsylvania. According to a studio executive, all these girls are winners on their merits. It is pointed out that they possess the appearance of breeding, beauty of face, poise and ability to deliver their lines convincingly that are today essential to film success.

MRS. MASSIE RESTS AFTER SUICIDE TRY

GENOA, Italy, April 7.—Recovered from the fit of melancholia that led her to attempt suicide aboard the liner Roma on a Mediterranean cruise, Mrs. Thalia Fortescue Massie smiled and chatted gaily today with nurses and attendants at Dr. Dario Borelli's clinic in the suburb of Albano.

Though she is being closely watched, to guard against another possible attempt upon her life, Dr. Borelli said he believed the crisis in her case had passed and that after a few weeks rest she would be perfectly normal.

Nevertheless Dr. Borelli gave strict instructions that she was not to be allowed to receive visitors, even including George I. Brandt, the United States consul, who called at the clinic and left flowers.

Normalcy in the Navy

Significance must be attached to the fact that when Josephus Daniels left the navy on the water wagon, the world and started a series of millions of tongues to the taking of the navy. The wagon caused barely a ripple.

Better proof could be asked of the public expects seafaring to have their rations of the world and the United States than Henry's. It will seem to most people that the navy has now returned to a normal state.

Alcoholic beverages have ever associated with the rough sea and no one has ever Uncle Sam's middle-aged. This was the navy's administrative for more than a century to which it now returns. President Wilson's secretary of the navy probably acted under a misapprehension. Finding liquor on the nation's ships of war was probably assumed that the sailors and officers were habitually drunk whether on or off duty. The navy does not realize that the sailor's shipboard as well as the shore.

Commissioned officers of the navy have never forgiven the secretary of the navy for that atrocious act. It reflected on the ability to use privilege like a gentleman.

Well, Inall didn't even have a wooden pistol.

Kidnapers Get Caught

PRISONERS planning a kidnapping career are likely to remember if they read the results of the 23 kidnaping cases recorded since 1930. Here is a recapitulation to discourage the daring and desperate would-be kidnapers.

There were made in 17 of the cases, the arrests numbering 20. Of the accused took their lives, two were lynched, three were executed, 13 are serving sentences, nine are serving terms of from 20 to 50 years, 15 received lighter jail sentences.

All of which goes to show that the public opinion cracks the law over the heads of the law enforcers the laws are enforced; that staying away from acts of kidnapping and desperate would-be kidnapers.

Had the perpetrators of those 23 kidnapings tallied as nearly a perfect score as the racketeer, gangster and political grafter no one would now be overrunning the safe from gangs of kidnapers which would now be overrunning the safe from gangs of kidnapers.

The movies have found some of the same scheme to imitate all kinds except British.

How can it be a living wage if those who get it die too soon for any of the things money would buy?

That worry is foolish and futile generally understood by everybody who has nothing to worry about.

It's no use. Any bright new scheme you think up would be in use now if experience hadn't proved a bust.

It is fine to advocate peace, but not really encourage warfare if you let the other fellow think he can win.

CHAPTER FIFTY

"What's the joke?" demanded Julian suspiciously.

"The joke is that she was at his house week-end before last."

"The devil she was! Well," said Julian, "I am surprised. I hardly expected such virtuosity from Martha. I thought she was devoted to me."

He laughed. "Are you sure, Patricia?"

"Phil Gove told me."

"Is that why you've been moping the last two days?"

"I haven't been moping! But if Clark is at the ball," she proceeded carefully, "if he is there, I hope you don't expect me to cut him. I assure you that I won't."

"I expect nothing so silly," he retorted, thoroughly out of sorts now. "Behave as you choose. Fall into his arms if you like. I don't give a darn."

"You once did," she reminded him.

"Maybe so," he agreed, his voice suddenly savage, "but the cure you've put me through the last two months has been thoroughly effective. Make a fool of yourself in any fashion you like, Patricia. I wash my hands of your affairs of the heart."

"Isn't this just a little late, Julian?"

"Better late than never," he quoted surlily. Presently he said with real and bitter feeling, "I'm sick of having you treat me like a dog. I'm sick of it that I'll admit. I made a mistake. Now, are you satisfied?"

"Do you think I should be?" she asked, confused and bewildered at this unexpected turn of events. Julian's surrender had come far too late. That it had come at all was a miracle.

"I've said I was sorry. I've never said I was sorry before. Now can't you and I be friends again?"

"I guess so," she said listlessly.

Presently they turned through great iron gates, manned by guards in uniform, lit by shining lanterns. Cars lined the grounds, doors were banging, lights were flashing in the trees. Furred women, laughing, lovely, strolled along the garden paths with men in evening dress toward a flight of marble steps.

Patricia and Julian were swept inside. The girl left her wrap in a dressing room sweet with the scent of flowers and perfume, gleaming with powdered backs and splendid jewels. No woman there was more exquisite than herself. Outside she joined Julian, who waited in a ring of other impatient men. He took her arm. They worked their way to the ballroom, through a babble of chatter, stopping often to exchange greetings. Patricia smiled and acknowledged a thousand compliments.

At the doorway of the ballroom, bejeweled and smart, stood Martha March. Beside her, receiving with her, was Clark Tracy.

The color left Patricia's face, and, as she advanced, she was very pale and looked taller than usual—taller and more stately. The blue gown, the consciousness of it, made her hold her head high, so that the light caught the beautiful line of her throat and rippled in the waves of her hair. To the world she seemed as serene and as confident as an empress. Inwardly she was a frightened, trembling girl.

It was over. It was over so quickly. Clark clasped her hand as he had clasped a hundred other hands. As he had addressed a hundred others he addressed her.

"It's good to see you here," he said. "I'm glad to be here," she faltered. "It's been a long time since I saw you last," Clark went on.

Long? They had parted on the second day of July. She had not seen him for three months. Yet he could say in that casual tone that it had seemed long. Long? She had crowded into that length of time more misery and heartache and grief than in the whole of her nineteen years. Long? To her it had been an eternity.

She faced him steadily, unblinkingly, the fixed smile upon her lips. Around her the voices seemed to roar, and the first notes of the orchestra had the sound of thunder. Someone was beside her. Julian was saying:

"Don't you want to dance, Patricia?"

So he had heard the polite, formal conversation. Had he noticed anything? He must have noticed. Else he, who hated dancing, would never have suggested that they dance.

"Thank you, Julian."

"But Julian—" Martha's voice cut like a knife into the little tableau—"but Julian, you haven't asked your hostess for a dance. This bad boy," she continued, linking her arm through Clark's, "has done his best to gobble up my evening. But I have saved the seventh dance for you."

"The seventh dance?" said Julian, pretending to consult an imaginary program, "the seventh dance it is."

"We'll exchange," suggested Martha, arranging everything with her own high hand, but sparing Clark a coquettish upward glance. "Is that all right with you, Clark?"

"Certainly," he said, courteous and quick. "How about it, Patricia? Will you dance with me?"

"Yes," she said dully.

They were out on the glittering, crowded floor, Patricia and Julian. The man made no pretense at dancing. He merely walked, letting the others make way for him. After a single circling of the floor he took mercy on his partner and steered her to a seat.

"I'm rotten," he confessed, moping at his forehead. "Aren't you glad I gave up the struggle?"

"It was all right," said Patricia. She was only vaguely conscious of his voice, only vaguely conscious of his surroundings, of the sweet, smooth music, of the scent of flowers, of the hum of conversation. If Julian had been a second Vernon Castle she would not that night have known it. She herself was dancing on leaden feet. Clark was lost to her.

"Would you like some punch, Patricia?"

"No, thanks. I'm not thirsty."

"Would you like me to slip Martha a shot of arsenic?"

That roused her, Patricia forced a wry little smile.

"That wouldn't help."

"Are you quite sure?" the man asked with the utmost seriousness. He grinned. He said lightly, "I always imagined Martha had more technique. I don't know when I've seen anything quite so raw. Do you know what I mean?"

"I guess I do," she replied, feeling that none of this had the least importance. "Wasn't she trying to make you jealous?"

"Right the first time," he agreed, preening a little despite his best intentions. "That girl," he said, "is nuts about me."

"And you love it."

"A man can't very well object."

"She's horrible," said Patricia thickly, refusing to be diverted by his foolery. "What Clark sees in her—"

"Or what she sees in Clark," ended Julian, neatly, decisively. "Really Patricia, in my opinion you're well rid of him."

"I don't care anything about your opinion," she muttered. "I don't want to talk about it any more."

The seventh dance came, the dance that Clark, bidden by Martha, had requested. Patricia had longed to leave before that dance. Her own pride kept her there. Martha and Clark approached, laughing and chattering together.

Martha explained the joke to Julian. "Reuben Blair has just arrived."

"He has!" exclaimed Julian, electrified. "Where is he? I want to see him."

"You're going to dance first, sir."

They were gone. Patricia and Clark were alone. They were together and were miles apart. Nothing was changed. Dancing could not change it. Clark was a stranger. Patricia stepped into his arms as she had so often done before, skillfully, mechanically followed his lead. He was concerned, he was interested, he was exquisitely polite—but somehow he was not the man she had known.

"My fault."

"No, it was mine, Clark. I—I'm clumsy tonight."

"You're never clumsy, Patricia."

"Yes, I am."

This was the way they talked after three months. Clark's polite, friendly, kindly words fell on the girl's heart like so many separate blows. He would have talked to so anyone. Had the separation meant nothing to him? Had she wept for a man to whom she meant nothing? The music ended. Instantly he dropped his arm. Clark's hand was at her elbow. He was piloting her carefully through the dissolving dancers.

At the edge of the floor, directly ahead, Patricia glimpsed a fat little man in old fashioned evening dress, glimpsed a plump, cherubic face. Reuben Blair was talking to his friends, expansive and pompous and thoroughly satisfied with himself. Not wishing to risk an encounter, she was just drawing back when she saw Julian bearing down on the happily unconscious Blair. Julian had a dangerous gleam in his eye. In the hope of preventing an unfortunate scene, the girl hurried forward, Clark at her elbow.

"My boat just docked this afternoon," she heard Blair saying to his friends. "I couldn't miss Martha's party. Yes, she wirelessly the invitation. Clever of her, wasn't it?"

"Too darn clever in my estimation," broke in Haverholt, joining the group at that instant. "I, for one, could have done without you."

Teaching the Child Good Habits

You Can't Start Too Early to Regulate a Youngster's Life

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

NOT SO long ago I told you how to plan a feeding schedule for the baby. It was pointed out that a well arranged routine schedule would materially lessen the work of the young mother and benefit the baby. Since then many inquiries have come to me concerning a program for the older child.

No one will deny that children who are brought up on an orderly program thrive better than children who do not receive such supervision. They are happier and healthier children.

I am often asked, when should a child be able to feed himself? When should he show an interest in helping to keep his room tidy and in order?

Every child between the ages of two and three should be able to assist in putting on his clothes. He should be instructed to help put on his bloomers and leggings, and place his arms in the sleeves of his suit coat and sweater.

Encourage Child to Do Things

Of course I do not mean to say that a child of this age should be expected to dress himself entirely or perform the difficult task of tying or untying his shoe laces. But he certainly should be able to take off his own rubbers, slippers and other easily removed articles of wearing apparel.

At this age it is a good plan to encourage a child to wash and dry his hands alone. Though he will not remove all the dirt and do as good a job as mother would, this early training will soon enable him to assume full responsibility. Children should acquire habits and if the program is to be a well regulated one, they should be good habits.

A child of three to four years should be able to undo his buttons, and button them up as well. This is simplified by making sure that the buttons are equipped with large buttons and large buttonholes. At this age he should be expected to put on and take off his shoes, lace his shoes, remove his rubbers, wash and dry his hands, as well as comb his hair and brush his teeth.

At the Age of Five

When a child reaches the age of five he should be well established in the personal habit program and indeed be an aid to his mother. Dressing and undressing should be a simple matter for this child. Of course, it is well if the clothing is equipped with simple and uncomplicated fasteners. I am glad to say that most modern clothing is equipped with "zippers." This invention is a blessing to the busy mother.

Perhaps no habit of childhood is more important than that of eating. Every child should have his meals at a regular time every day. No food should be given between meals. Contrary to a common belief, a child should be allowed to feed himself as soon as possible. Between the ages of twelve to eighteen months he should be permitted to handle the cup and spoon.

Encourage the child to eat without coaxing, urging or offering of prizes. If the child does not eat, it is best to remove the food rather than to threaten him with punishment.

Roosevelt to Go on Air Again to Spank the Wall Street Boys

WASHINGTON — The President is slated to go on the air again with one of his intimate radio talks to the Nation. Behind the broadcast plan is the tremendous under-cover campaign of misrepresentation and distortion which Wall Street is directing against the New Deal. Inner Administration circles report that Roosevelt is aroused by it and ready to give the Wall Street gang a public spanking. Data on the channel, harbor, etc. at Leningrad already have been gathered. The private bathroom of Soviet Ambassador Troianovsky in Washington is as large as most people's living rooms. It contains a sunken Roman plunge and several showers. Moscow bathrooms frequently lack running water. Thomas Jefferson (An Editorial)

Today, April 13, will herald the hundred ninety-first anniversary of the birth of the "Father of Declaration of Independence." Almost alone of the leaders who established the government of the United States, Jefferson had no money and no family. He was a poor, earnest, cordial, and sympathetic in his manner, full of confidence in men, and sanguine in his views of life.

Superintendent Daley says of Jefferson: "Thomas Jefferson was an aristocrat and reared as a typical southern gentleman. He thus belonged both by birth and education to Virginia's aristocracy and yet I know of no American statesman who had a greater interest in the common people. It was that interest that shaped his political philosophy and won for him immortal fame."

SENIOR PLAY WRITTEN BY POVENMIRE

Faculty Member's Original 3-Act Comedy Selected For Upper Classmen.

An original three-act folk-comedy written by E. K. Povenmire, director of dramatics at C. H. S., has been selected as the Senior play.

The play called "Butter Side Down" is built around the patriarch "Pop," and his wife "Elly," and their midwest small town life. The play was composed definitely for high schools at the "47" Workshop at Yale university under direction of Professor George Pierce Baker, and is one of the seven written by Mr. Povenmire.

Senior tryouts will be held early next week, and regular rehearsals will begin immediately after "Shirt Sleeves" is presented by the Junior class on April 19 and 20. "Butter Side Down" has never before been presented.

To have outranked the entire Senior class in this important branch of the curriculum is no mean achievement. The Red and Black extends to Master Robert its hearty congratulations.

Young Lane is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Lane, Half-ave, Circleville.
